LAURIER RECEPTION.
The committee formed to organize a reception to the Hon. Wilfrid Laurier and party, met on Saturday evening in the Alberta hotel. The several sub-committees reported. From these reports it appeared that good progress was being made in fitting up the curling rink. The floor had been covered with saw dust so as to make the place perfectly clean. The seats will be in place to-night. Special seats will be provided for the ladies. The windows will be repaired and the walls decorated with evergreens, so that unless the weather is altogether inclement it will be quite comfortable. In case the weather is unsuitable for holding the meeting in the rink it will be held in Robertson hall, so that bad weather will not prevent a meeting. The finance committee reported a hearty response from citizens of all politics in the matter of providing the necessary funds. It is understood that as has been done in other places the town council will tender a formal welcome to Mr. Laurier and party on behalf of the town. A letter was read from James Sutherland, M. P., dated from Victoria, in which it was stated that it was Mr. Laurier's desire that as little expense as possible should be incurred on the occasion of his visit, and that it was his desire to meet as many of the citizens and settlers of the district as possible in the limited time at his disposal. The next meeting of the committee will be held in the council chamber on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at which it is expected the final arrangements will be made. All who desire to assist in the reception will be welcome.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, SEPTEMBER 17th, 1894.

THE TRAVELLING DAIRY.

Messrs J. B. MacEwan and L. A. Zufelt of the Dominion travelling dairy arrived on Thursday's train and opened their experimental lecture in the council chamber on Friday afternoon, the bad roads having prevented any large attendance from the country in the morning. The dairy party visited Maple creek, Calgary, Olds and Red Deer before coming to Edmonton, at all of which places they had a good attendance, and much interest was manifested. The attendance here on Friday afternoon numbered about forty. At 2 p. m. Mr. MacEwan gave a brief outline of the work of the travelling dairies since 1891, and of the work of the dairy this summer. He then explained the theory of separating milk by centrifugal force and a practical test of the work of the centrifugal separator was given from milk supplied by Mr. Groat. Several samples of milk were tested in the Babcock tester and a full explanation given of the working of the test and of its accuracy and cheapness. Also of its value to private dairymen in testing the milk from single cows with a view to arriving at a knowledge of their respective yields of butter; and its special value in co-operative dairying, making it possible to pay for milk according to quality. Mr. Zufelt then gave an address on the ripening of cream, explaining the details of handling the cream and the ripening process, the proper development of acid in the cream and having the proper temperature for churning. A practical demonstration of butter making was then given, showing the different parts of the work from the churning to the manufactured article, ready for the market. At every stage of the butter making, reasons were given why certain conditions were provided, so as to secure the best results. While the churn was running Mr. MacEwan gave a brief address on the three systems of separating cream from milk, using as illustrations the charts which showed the results arrived at on the central experimental farm after the most careful continued tests. Deep setting has an advantage over shallow setting in that the milk is so much less liable to attract odors or impurities in the deep cans, and for the first six months a cow is giving milk the deep setting gives the best results in cream. But in order to secure the best results from deep setting the cans must be set in ice cold water. In the case of cows milking after six months, the shallow setting gave considerably better results than the deep setting. The mixing of the milk of more lately calved cows with that of those which had been milking over six months materially decreased the loss on the latter. On the whole for this country the deep setting was the best, provided it was properly handled. But whenever the quantity of milk to be worked would admit of the purchase of a separator that system was recommended as the best in ease of working, cleanliness and complete separation of the cream from the milk. The separator used in the experiments was the Danish Alexandra, which is recommended as the best made. The churn was a common barrel churn without flanges on the inside and having the over and motion. The appliances for working the butter was the most simple of all the contrivances used, but as it is applicable to dairies of any but the largest size and is a great saver of hard labor a description of it may be of value to those who had not the opportunity of seeing it. It is a small three cornered table with flanges at each side but not at either the wide or narrow end. It has a slight slant downward towards the point so that all moisture in the butter drains away as it is being worked. A small six sided oak roller, as long as the table, having one end loosely pivoted at the small end of the table leaves the other end to be handled by the hand of the operator. This roller is given a sufficient downward pressure by the hand of the operator to squeeze a little of the moisture out immediately under the roller and the pressure is repeated until after the butter has been turned several times the unnecessary moisture is squeezed out and the butter is cut into prints without further working. The great advantage in the use of this butter worker is that the whole churning is made ready for prints in the same time that a single roll would be by the ordinary hand process, and the labor, owing to the weight of the body being utilized to the best advantage is not nearly as great. During the whole process of working it is not once touched by the hands, nor lifted except once from the churn to the table and then from the table to the shelf in the form of prints.

On Saturday morning Messrs MacEwan and Zufelt were ready to proceed with their tests and lecture at 9 o'clock, but owing to the small attendance at that hour the lecture was postponed until the afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon the meeting was characterized by a larger assembly of farmers and their wives than were present at the previous meetings. Mr. Hutchings, president of the agricultural society was voted chairman and after a few introductory remarks called upon Mr. Zufelt to give an address upon "The Advantages of Home Dairying."

In presenting this subject to his hearers, Mr. Zufelt said that he would try not to be tedious and merely dwell upon the chief points where losses ensued, for by finding out where the loss was made, we at the same time find out how to make dairying more successful.

The first essential for dairying was the proper kind of dairyman or dairywoman, for without this essential everything else would be sure to be incorrect. It was necessary that those who take the matter in hand, should have a decided love for the work they are engaged in as well as being interested in it from the amount of money that was to be gained from it. He had heard a great deal about the different breeds of cattle, of one kind being superior to another, and was often asked which were the most profitable. In answer to such a question he often gave the answer of a well known professor who said that "if the various breeds of cows could talk, there would be a big bawls for the proper kind of dairymen." The difference was not so much in the breed of cattle as it was in the treatment these cattle received. He recommended that they be well fed and kindly treated, for experiments with cattle had quantity and quality of the milk, while cows that were chased and worried would give less milk and of a poorer quality than those treated kindly. Another requisite was salt and good water. Some people thought that any kind of water would do for cattle; but he considered it a mistake, for when it is considered that 87 per cent. of milk is water, it follows that if the cow gets bad water, it is sure to have an evil effect upon the milk she produces. In eastern Canada a great deal of the bad butter is attributable to bad water. If good water, cannot be procured he would certainly not recommend the farmer to start dairying.

The next essential, and indeed this was almost the primary essential, was that of cleanliness. This was important at every stage of the operation, from the milking, until the perfect article was properly put away.

The lecturer then went on to show where the chief losses in dairying came in. The first, he said, was in skimming the milk. The loss here, is in not getting the full amount of butter fat from it. Usually milk was put into shallow pans and not set in pure air and the milk from the various cows was kept separate. He urged that the milk from the whole herd should be mixed because the milk from different cows gave different sized globules. Some gave large globules, others small. The largest globules, rise to the surface more readily than the others so that by mixing the milk of the whole herd together the large globules mix with the smaller ones and rise to the surface first, helping up the smaller ones to the surface on the way. He would advise that the pans should not be too shallow, because the large globules would then not get to the surface, being kept down by the network of smaller globules that would weave together and intersect their course to the surface.

The losses in deep setting pans was caused by the difference in the cold water surrounding the can, which should never be above 45 degrees. Should it rise above this, the dairyman is certain to lose nearly half the cream. He then gave a few points on the care of cream. First, he said, it depends upon where it is kept and how it is kept. A pail with a fitting lid was recommended. One that could be kept clean and would keep the air from the cream, for air can never do it any good, and quite frequently does harm. The milk should then be stirred so as to have it uniform throughout. It should also be kept at a cool temperature in order to keep it from souring. Perhaps in the ripening of cream the greatest losses occurred. Some dairymen, he said, kept their cream in two or three vessels and then mixed them together before churning. In this case, the milk in each vessel would be at a different stage of ripeness. One lot would make butter before the other. Tests made of buttermilk from butter churned in this way always showed a large percentage of fat globules. The cream should be all put together at least 12 hours before churning, for then all would take the same amount of time to churn. It was also necessary to look at the temperature, because an incorrect temperature often caused great loss. He recommended the use of a thermometer every time churning was to be done.

The cost of the Babcock often precluded farmers from having one of their own; but where neighbors were together, he advised them to form a club and get one between them. One would sometimes answer for three or four farms. He deprecated the idea of groping about in the dark and not knowing exactly what to expect and urged the necessity of skilled labor. Whenever co-operation was possible, he thought the creamery was the best means for manufacturing butter; but where home dairying had to be depended upon, he suggested that instead of butter being put up in rolls of all sizes and shapes and in all kinds of wrapping, that they be put up in proper form and uniform sizes. He asked the audience which they thought would bring the highest market price, half a churning of butter wrapped in prints and looking nice or the other half of the churning put in a basket with an old cloth over it? Appearances, he thought went a long way.

Another loss was in washing the butter. Some people take it out of the buttermilk and wash it in a bowl; but the plan he advised was to wash it in the churn by putting cold water in it. When the granules get as large as sago it is time to take off some of the butter milk, then put water into the churn and go on as if churning. In this way the operator does away with the labor of cleaning. All that has to be done then is the addition of salt and working it to get the over plus amount of water out of it. He did not advise over salting; but said the best salt procurable should always be used. Some people thought that salt kept butter; but this was a mistake, salt was only used to flavor it. The main point is to exclude the air, then it will keep much better than it otherwise would.

The reason that a good price is not always given for good butter is due to the want of uniformity among butter makers. Among 50 lots of butter all are not the same. All are not bad; but even among all the good butter there are differences in the amount of salt, color etc. This difficulty being overcome in the creamery is the reason that creamery butter commands a better price in the market. It is all made in the one way and is uniform in quality. He thought that as good and probably better butter was made by the home dairymen than in creameries, and indeed there was no reason why he should not, because the home dairymen had the handling of the milk from the very outset, whereas the creamery operative had to take the milk as it was brought to him; but the uniformity of the creamery butter always made it reliable and higher in public favor.

The lecturer then closed by urging the necessity of skilled labor. Mr. J. B. MacEwan then addressed the meeting on "Co-operative Dairying" and stated the experience he gave had been accumulated by years of experience in the dairy station at Ottawa. He went on to show the advantages of co-operation and expressed pleasure at finding that the people of the Edmonton district had already begun to establish creameries. In some districts, he said, the people had gone in for it too soon. Some farmers had withdrawn their patronage leaving the creameries difficult to keep up, and finally had to be abandoned. He would not advise that creameries be started except where 300 cows can be got within 5 or 6 miles. The advantages to be gained were, 1st Uniformity of quality, 2nd Economy of labor, one man doing the work of 30, 3rd Concentration of responsibilities. Mr. MacEwan said that Prof. Robertson was endeavoring to induce the C. P. R. to establish creameries in sections suitable, and arrangements had been come to, whereby the C. P. R. would build a good building and put in a good equipment in sections where the farmers would guarantee the milk of 300 cows in an area 10 miles square. The farmers could then own and operate these by paying 5 per cent. on the capital invested for two years, after which Prof. Robertson would conduct them for the farmers who by this time would have taken over the plant, the C. P. R. selling the plant to them at original cost. The freight rates on dairy produce having recently been reduced, it is presumed that the cost of freightage would be the same as it is to-day, viz. $1.70 per 100 lbs.

In the experiments of butter making, 60 lbs. of milk supplied by Mr. Groat made 3 1/2 lbs. of butter.

From the tests made throughout the whole of this district the milk has tested 4 1/2 per cent. of butter fat as compared with 3 1/2 per cent. in Ontario.

Mr. Zufelt and Mr. MacEwan visited the Edmonton Creamery Co's building near Poplar lake to day and leave for Wetaskiwin in the morning.

PEACE RIVER.

Rev. J. Gough Brick who has been a missionary of the Church of England in the Peace river country for over eight years and who established Christ Church Mission on the Peace river near the mouth of the Smoky, is in town on his way east to spend the winter in Ontario or perhaps Jamaica. Mr. Brick's health has been failing since last winter when he suffered from a severe attack of influenza, and he is now compelled to give up active mission work. Mr. Brick's efforts have been directed to the civilization as well as the Christianizing of the Indians of Peace river, and to that end he has established a mission farm, with the necessary machinery, a school and a mill at his mission. He has been successful in collecting a considerable number of the Indians and inducing them to adopt at least a partially civilized life, which includes the cultivation of small patches of ground on the river flat near the mission. The past year has been the driest on record in that region and crops are consequently light. Wheat is about a quarter crop, but of good sample. Oats and barley yield less proportionally than the wheat. Coarse vegetables are a total failure. The season was very warm. On August 25th the thermometer stood at 92 in the shade, and this was not at all exceptional. The total rainfall for the summer was not more than two inches along the river and yet strange to say fifty miles north of the river the Indians complained of too much rain. Berries were abundant all over the Peace river country this year. Rabbits are commencing to die off and this means hard times for the Indians in another year. At Fort Vermilion several hundred miles further north than Mr. Brick's mission and further down stream, where there is a considerable settlement, there was abundance of rain and exceptionally good crops. At Fort Dunvegan some fifty miles up Peace river from the mission, there was as little rain and crops were as poor as at the mission. Lesser Slave lake, 90 miles this side of Peace river had not been quite as dry as at Peace river and the gardens and potato patches are somewhat better, but still were not good. The road from Peace river to Lesser Slave lake was dryer than Mr. Brick ever saw it before. In the Peace river the water has been high all summer and very little mining has been done. Mr. Brick goes east on Tuesday's train.

GENERAL NEWS.

Summer complaint is still prevalent amongst children in Winnipeg. Typhoid fever has broken out in Winnipeg and is expected to increase. The doctors advise that all drinking water be boiled.

Hon. Wilfrid Laurier and party received a most enthusiastic reception at Vancouver from the most prominent men in political life in British Columbia.

Herald, Battleford: Among the edible delicacies to be had here are fine ripe tomatoes which have been freely offered on the market during the past week or two. They were grown and matured in the open air.

The Wawanesa Enterprise remarks: "The fact is the American farmer has had thirty years of protection, we have had fifteen. He has doubtless had an advantage of a large population with a larger market, and as a result of population a greater home competition in the production of the absolute necessities of life. Yet he is ruined. What will our position be five years hence, little else than paupers now?"

The Montreal Star says: Yet the only legitimate view of party is to regard it as an implement with which to accomplish a set purpose. If the purpose be a good one loyalty to the organization until it is accomplished is synonymous with patriotism; but the moment a man feels that loyalty to party and loyalty to country are pulling in opposite directions, he has released party from servitude and permitted it to assume an altogether wrongful position. When party would defend the noble sentiment of loyalty to itself, and would turn public honors and emoluments into its private strong-box, it becomes a thieving usurper; and that man is the true traitor and the true "turncoat" patriotism who does not help drive it back into servitude again. The cure of many of our ills will be found when we press party down into its proper place.

Battleford Herald: Most of the beef cattle in this district have been secured by men who will ship to Montreal direct or use up local contracts, and several heavy transactions have recently taken place. W. H. Sinclair has secured the residue of the Wild estate beef cattle—197 head in all. J. M. Skelton has bought all the beefers on the ranges of Richard Bro's, Lizard Lake, and Paynter & McCready, Big Gully—the latter said to be the finest lot of export cattle ever marketed here. Taking these lots and those bought by Geo. Day for Gordon & Ironside and for his own contract with the mounted police the number of first-class cattle sold from this district for cash foots up about a thousand. This is a good showing, yet it does not include the Wyld estate cattle nor those required for the Indian department or the industrial school. The department buys from the Indians, paying six cents a pound for the meat; the school gets its supplies in the open market, doing the slaughtering on the premises. Messrs Skelton, Rose and Sinclair have arranged to ship a train of seven cars of fat cattle to Montreal about the 10th of October, and some other parties are talking of sending a train later in the season. Paynter & McCready have just sold a lot of twenty yearling heifers to T. Lucy for three hundred dollars.

LOCAL
THOS. HENDERSON of Honey Glade has had the best of fortune with his bees this year and has now 77 strong swarms with plenty of honey go through the winter with after yielding from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred pounds of extracted honey worth 20c a pound. He has had scarcely any losses. There was an excellent flow of honey in July, but the flow ceased this season earlier than usual.

WETASKIWIN.
The crops are now nearly all harvested and are in such a condition as to gladden the hearts of the farmers. There has been an entire absence of frost, and the grain is both abundant and in excellent condition. This district has only been settled three years and each year has proved it to be one of the best in the country. Numerous homesteaders have come in this year and few free lands are now obtainable. Excellent lands can, however, be bought near the town for $4 per acre.

Several business changes have lately been made in the town. The livery stable conducted by Larose & Gould has been bought by Fraser & Anderson who will in future carry on that business. James Gould has bought the interest of C. Fraser in the Duhamel creamery.

Mr. Walker, who for some time has conducted the druggist business for Burnes & Co., has now commenced business on his own account.

Mr. Reid, of London, England, has been visiting his son at Beaver lake. He expresses himself as being delighted with the country, and also states that coming through the States and Canada he hears the Alberta district being generally spoken of as the future great agricultural success of North America, and that a large number of people are likely to come here.

Prince Albert Times:—The harvest is now about completed around these parts so far as grain crops are concerned, and we are thankful that we are enabled to state that the returns are all that could be desired. From all that we can learn the wheat crop is fully up to the average, while barley and oats are also plentiful. There is also every reason to believe that the potato crop will be an abundant one. For the ingathering of the crops the weather has been delightful with a total absence of frost.
